- Alpha Omega Ministry

- Contact: Caton Yang (ccyang@princeton.edu)
- Description: The AO Ministry is dedicated to providing a comfortable, loving environment for students who want to familiarize themselves with the content of the Bible. It will serve as a discussion group for members to talk about all aspects of their lives, explore religious concepts, and understand how to apply biblical principles to their lives. This organization further strives to serve the local and international community through service activities and fundraising events. Its activities include holding Bible discussions, individual Bible study, service activities and various other events. It plans to hold a Special Lecture series, where trained theologians will speak on topics ranging from race and the Bible to spiritual formation. It has already hosted "Meet-A-Friend," where its members would greet and talk with students that passed by the Frist Tables on the 100 level. Most people who stopped by the table gave a quick introduction, briefly discussing their day before leaving with a word of encouragement.

- Classics Club

- Contact: Tashi Treadway (tashi@princeton.edu)
- The Classics Club plans on increasing awareness of the classics and providing an open forum where students can discuss the classics on campus. It looks to hold Dinner discussions with professors on various topics in and relevant to the classics. It further plans to hold monthly meetings, rhetoric recitations, and translation group studies. It also looks to host group trips to the Art Museum, and into NYC to watch classical plays. Finally, it plans on hosting a Certamen Tournament on February 24 – a classics quiz-bowl competition for High School students.

- Filipinos Living in Princeton (FLIP)

- Contact: Ysabel Ayala (yayala@princeton.edu)
- FLIP aims to celebrate Filipino culture, traditions, food, and language, connecting people who are of Filipino decent or interested in learning about the Philippines. It hopes to build relationships with Filipino graduate students and employees. It further seeks to hold a host of activities, such as traditional Filipino dance shows and workshops, discussions on themes ranging from Philippine politics to textile history, cooking lessons, and local Philippine television series watch parties.

• Hoop Zine

- Contact: Himaayah Agwedicham (himaayah@princeton.edu)
- Hoop Zine is an alternative artistic publication that aims to promote inclusivity among students on campus with marginalized identities, promote artistic diversity by drawing from an array of perspectives on Princeton's campus, provide forum for interdisciplinary collaboration between students who practice different art forms and create a space for people of color on campus to showcase their work. It hopes to create a community among students of color on campus by promoting art, celebrating the work of people who are often overlooked. The art collective aims to create a monthly zine (small-circulation publication of original works), but also host other types of programming and social events that would create a space that promotes emotional, physical, and mental health-- all tied together by the promotion of the arts. This would be achieved through hosting Talk Series where artists of color and art collectives would share how their lives at artists developed, hosting exhibits to display the artworks from the publication, and hosting workshops aimed at teaching people how to create their own zine.

• Princeton MedHack

- Contact: Claire Lee (clairelee@princeton.edu)
- Princeton MedHack will be a two-day (36-hour event, once a year) during which students from Princeton and other universities will gather for a weekend of intense innovation to address healthcare-related problems. During the two-day event, MedHack will invite healthcare entrepreneurs as speakers and will host a variety of workshops that students can freely attend. Example topics of workshops include: Insights into the Medical Device Development Process and Machine Learning using CoreML. MedHack will also invite clinicians, engineers, and entrepreneurs as mentors to help teams solidify their ideas and products. Teams will pitch their ideas to a panel of qualified judges, after which monetary prizes and sponsorship opportunities will be awarded to the top three teams. Outside of the hackathon, MedHack will invite prominent healthcare innovators to give talks at Princeton to share their insights and experiences. Princeton MedHack models other MedHack competitions at universities around the country.

• Princeton Student Veteran Alliance (under PACE)

- Contact: Tyler Eddy (tjeddy@princeton.edu)
- The Princeton Student Veteran Alliance is a PACE-approved group aimed at connecting student veterans around campus. It hopes to create a place of welcome for transitioning veterans, so they may better acclimate to Princeton studies and life. It hopes to connect the student veteran body with its peers through service and social engagement. The Princeton Student Veterans Alliance would also like to promote the value of having veterans be a part of the student body. The Princeton Student Veterans Alliance does not plan to solely allow membership to U.S. veterans, and also looks forward to adding veterans from the international community here on campus. It has participated in a one-day Pre-Orientation for student veterans organized by Director of Transfer Programs and attended the Ivy League Veterans Council Meeting on September 30th. It volunteered for the New Jersey Special Olympics and plans on volunteering for the Trenton Habitat for Humanity, in addition to holding weekly mentoring meetings.

• Princeton University Physics Competition

- Contact: Olivia Long (olong@princeton.edu)
- PUPC has hosted multiple high school physics competition in previous years, and now seeks official recognition. It plans on continuing to host yearly high school physics competitions. Throughout the year, it will plan for and prepare to host the competition, to take place on November 19. Through running the competition, it hopes that the undergraduate students involved in event planning will get to know the Physics Department better and collaborate with other physics majors. The competition also introduces high school physics students to Princeton and its physics department — for the past years, many of the undergraduate volunteers for PUPC have been PUPC competitors before coming to Princeton.

The Printer Group – Project Update

Project Leader: Andrew Ma

Project Team Members: Diego Negrón-Reichard, Christine Jeong, Nick Wu

Date: 11/12/17

1. Meeting with OIT

- A few years ago, OIT determined that there was no location on campus that was more than three minutes walk from a printer.
- OIT is very amenable to adding new printers in limited number of high-traffic locations.
- At the same time, if there are printers that currently are not highly used, OIT would consider relocating them to the new spots.
 - Discussed giving USG anonymized data on printer use to determine high/low usage areas.
- OIT expressed sustainability concerns. Will increased printers cause an increase in printing? Any increase in number of printers on campus should be paired with a sustainability initiative to encourage decreased printing.
 - In October alone, approximately one million pages were printed at Princeton, costing $50,000.

2. Next Steps

- Finish creating heat map of printers on campus.
- Create survey for student feedback on where they need more printers, and identify most popular locations.
- Collaborate with OIT on analyzing current printer usage data.
- Collaborate with OIT on sustainability initiative to reduce total printing.
- Goal: come to agreement with OIT about adding printers by the end of the semester.

Academics Chair's Report

New Members

- George Rettaliata 2021 Nassau Weekly, Aquinas Society. A primary goal of his is to reevaluate the freshman course selection process in seeking to improve the current system of varying course selection times. The 3 PM appointment time he was given ended in an inability to take all of the courses he had wanted to take and many of his fellow classmates experienced this same problem.
- Yousef Elzalabany 2020, Princeton Tonight, MSA, MASJID. Suggested a policy which allows students shopping classes to request extensions/leeway on assignments for the classes they ultimately select, within reason. To do this I'd like to formalize the shopping process so that professors can see proof that the students in question are shopping courses and not just trying to get an extension.
- Sara Hailu 2021. Involved with Princeton Club Archery and Princeton Ethiopian and Eritrean Student Association (PEESA). One of her main initiatives for academics at Princeton is raising more awareness about the incredible but underutilized aid that the McGraw Center provides for tutoring. She has already used the group tutoring service a number of times, but she has found that most of her fellow freshmen are underestimating, and thus not going to see, what it has to offer. Another initiative she has is improving the Peer Academic Advising system. By providing additional training for PAAs covering a broader range of academic topics (across different concentrations, for example) or having freshmen specialized to PAAs that share similar academic paths, PAAs could be more involved with and effective in freshmen's academic experience.

Committee on the Course of Study

- Continuing discussions around the general education requirements

Committee on Undergraduate Admissions and Financial Aid

- Meets in late November. Devin Kilpatrick and I will request that applicants be able to self-report AP, SAT, and ACT scores.

Thesis Deadlines

- Met with Dr. Poussart in the Office of Undergraduate Research. Wants to move thesis deadlines all to one week. Would make for greater senior class unity and fairness in theses across departments.

Honor Constitution Review Committee

- Kevin Liu '18 to be a member of the committee. Kevin has been actively involved in Honor Committee reform and is a member of the 2018 Class Government. Given there is no class government representation and the class governments are interrelated with the Honor Committee, it seemed important to have a representative of the class governments.
- The committee has been hard at work, meeting every week to discuss and mold possible reforms
- Student feedback was very helpful in shaping our decisions
- Reached out to the entire membership of the Honor Committee (3 gave input)
- Discussion of Referendum Rules as they relate to the Honor Constitutions Amendments

USG Urges the University enroll Puerto Rican Students for the Spring 2018 Term

- Request: Following the destruction brought by Hurricanes Irma and Maria, Princeton University should admit a select number of students from Puerto Rico for the 2018 Spring term at no cost
- Precedent: in 2005, following Hurricane Katrina, twenty-four Tulane University students were enrolled at Princeton tuition-free
- Peer institutions, including Cornell, Brown, and NYU, have committed to each hosting over fifty students for the 2018 Spring semester tuition-free.
- The USG body has the responsibility and capacity to nudge and remind the administration of its own duties. To not do so would be a failure on our part.
